XI. Numb. 35.

THE OBSERVATOR.

r Account of the Argument between Roger and an High-Church Man, whereby the l Queſtion propounded in The Conduct of the Allies, &c. is prov'd to be Treaſon in as well as by the Explanation of it in the Remarks on the Barrier Treaty, &c. That wer imply'd in ſeveral Statutes ſince the Revolution to be in the Legiſlature to limit nd the Crown, &c. is perverted by that Author to be a Power to alter or change the ion. Some incident Obſervations on other Paragraphs in the Remarks, &c.

From Saturday, April 26. to Wednesday, April 30. 1712.

YOU told me laſt Day, Roger, that you had not ended your Account of the Diſpute betwixt you and the Clergyman.

m. Yes, Maſter; nor, I hope, will it s Author's Side any where, but where o do, a Mile or ſo out of Town on the Road. Doctor, reply'd I, If you have elſe to produce, you have produc'd juſt all, but what's directly againſt you; r Art of Diſtinguiſhing can help you imiting and binding the Crown, and the nd Government thereof, to be altering or he Succeſſion of it: And let me tell you ave gone a very great way to prove to my hand, and make your Author's Circumſtances in the firſt Inſtance I ſhall ſhow 'em to be upon ſumming idence, In the firſt place, let me ask ther any Change was made of the Set-reed on in the Convention, by the Stat. M Parl. 1. Seſſ. 2 ch. 2. ſubſequent to ny Party to it in the Succeſſion laid aſide ute? It cannot be pretended to. The ing Clauſe then which you lay a ſtreſs more than a Conditional Limitation, ct by the Conſent of the Partys to t or Agreement in being and poſſeſ- the Settlement eſtabliſh'd in virtue e whole Legiſlature, and limiting der what Qualifications the Deſcen- e Settlement ſhall take; but is no he Succeſſion it ſelf, as was made by on. For obſerve, Doctor, the next Heir in the ſame Line, and manner of to ſucceed the incapable Perſon, if uch appears. And this, I think, is explain the Senſe of the firſt Statute wiſe than what you would inſinuate s to the next, 12 W. 3. ch. 2. when ou in mind, that her preſent Majeſty y Succeſſor to the Crown at the time was made, and the laſt in that Set- d therefore a further was thought nd that ſuch further Settlement was e upon the ſame Foot of Succeſſion liant Line, by like Conſent and Au- with like Limitations; I believe will not deny, but that what has s to the Original Settlement, is ſuf- plain the Senſe of this too, to be nſt you. And now comes the Statute 8. which, as you rightly obſerve, igh Treaſon to affirm, That the ueens of England, by Parliament, Laws to limit and bind the Crown, and the Deſcent and Government thereof. And is this any more than meerly a Conſequence, and in affirmance and ſupport of the Two former? This is demonſtrated by the Two other Clauſes in that Act: The one making High Treaſon to affirm, that Queen Anne is not lawfully or righfully Queen; and the other, That any other Perſon or Perſons have any other Right to the Crown, otherwiſe than according to the ſaid other Two Statutes. So that, Dr. here is no Power imply'd to alter or change the Succeſſion; but only to reſtrain effectually all treaſonable Poſitions of Indefeaſible Hereditary Right, in any other Perſon, or in any other manner, than according to thoſe Acts of Settlement. (And you won't deny, but that when both were made, there was, and yet is, a Pretender to ſuch a Right.) Was it not in the laſt of thoſe Statutes enacted, That for any Perſon, by Writing or Printing, to affirm, That the Kings or Queens of England, by the Authority of Parliament, cannot make Laws to bind the Crown, and the Deſcent and Government thereof, (as had been done by the Two former Statutes) ſhould be High Treaſon? And now I hope you are ſatisfy'd my Maſter cited what was enough for his purpoſe at that time, and was only not too hard upon your Author.

Obſ. But what ſaid you to his Objections from the Union-Act, and that of 6 Annæ, ch. 7.?

Countrym. You ſhall hear, Maſter. As to the Union Act, Doctor, ſaid I, you have yet a harder Caſe of it. Is not the Settlement of the Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover ſettled by that Act in like manner as it was done in England by the Stat. 13 W. 3. ch. 2? Is not this the Tenor of the Second Article, and eſtabliſh'd by the Act of Union, 5 Annæ, ch. 8. as the Succeſſion of the United Kingdoms? And can it be altered or changed without a direct Breach of that Union? Nay, are not the Penaltys of High Treaſon, in particular, enacted by the Stat. 4 Annæ, ch. 8. ſo often mention'd, extended by the Stat. 6 Annæ, ch. 7. throughout the United Kingdoms? And is there in either of theſe a Power imply'd to alter or change that Succeſſion, when it would be a Breach of that Union on which the Legiſlature itſelf, as it now ſtands, is founded?

Obſ. I ſee now you are coming home to him, Roger.

Countrym. I am ſo, Maſter; I thank you for inſtructing me. Doctor, continu'd I, to what I have ſaid, let me only add, that by another Statute, 1. Anne, Seſſ. 1. Stat. 2. Ch. 2. It is alſo enacted, That if any Perſon ſhall endeavour to deprive the next in Succeſſion to the Crown, for the Time

d. when ... reaſon to ſuppoſe ... Privateers which cruiſed thereabouts. A Squa- and the frequent Cabals held there.

On

Time being, according to the Limitation, 1. of W. and M.. Parl. 1. Seſſ. 2. Ch. 2. and the 12 of W. 3. Ch. 2. (being thoſe ſo often already mentioned, and which is now the Princeſs Sophia of Hanover, according to the latter; and are reſpecting that Succeſſion, Laws of the United Kingdom) from ſucceeding after Her Majeſty's Death; and the ſame ſhall attempt by any Overt-Act, ſuch Offence ſhall be adjudg'd High Treaſon. And now let me ask you by what Name ought we to call your Author's Political Queſtion, or Suppoſition, whereby he is pleas'd to inſinuate it to be neither right in point of Policy or Prudence to call in a Foreign Power to be Guarantee to our Succeſſion, ſo ſolemnly ſettled and limited; becauſe, by that Means, we put it out of the Power, of our own Legiſlature to alter or change that Succeſſion, which by that very Legiſlature too, 'tis made High Treaſon in any Perſon to endeavour to alter or change, ſo as to deprive the next in Succeſſion, according to the aforeſaid Acts of Settlement, from ſucceeding to; and which by the Union Act, ſeems inconſiſtent with the very Being of the Legiſlature itſelf? With Submiſſion to you, is not writing and printing, and publiſhing too by Thouſands, ſuch an Inſinuation, an Overt-Act of your Author's Goodwill or Endeavours that way, had he a ſuitable Power to accompliſh them? Treaſon, God be prais'd, of this kind eſpecially, very rarely takes effect; but in Overt Acts to the Ruin of the Traytors. Did the Perſons that were convicted of the Aſſaſſination Plot againſt his late Majeſty King William, accompliſh what they endeavour'd? No, the Endeavour itſelf was an Overt Act of High Treaſon. Did Aſhton, the Letter Carrier between St. Germains and London, do more than endeavour to carry on that treaſonable Correſpondence? and yet that Endeavour was an Overt Act of High Treaſon, as an Attempt to dethrone and deſtroy their late Majeſtys. And now, Gentlemen, ſaid I, addreſſing my ſelf to all the Company, judge for your ſelves; whether as my Maſter detected him of Treaſon in explaining the Political Queſtion he propounded, and thereby deny'd Her Majeſty's Title, according to the Settlement of the Crown, made at the Revolution, I have not alſo detected him of the like Treaſon in propounding that very Queſtion in Diſheriſon of the now next in Succeſſion, after Her Majeſty's Death? And further, to convince you that he meant ſo, even by propounding it, is evident by his continuing the Queſtion, p. 14. in theſe Words. Do theſe Gentlemen of Revolution Principles, (meaning the Whigs) think it impoſſible we ſhould ever have occaſion again to change our Succeſſion? and if ſuch an Accident ſhould fall out, muſt we have no Remedy till the Seven Provinces give their Conſent? Every Body knows how inſtrumental Her Majeſty's Good Allies the Dutch were in contributing towards the Revolution, to which we owe, (as has been ſaid) our preſent Settlement; and our Author is under a mighty Concern, leſt they ſhould ſo ſupport it, as effectually to prevent another.

Obſ. But were you not put in Mind, Roger, of the preſumptive Succeſſor, (as he calls her) and her immediate Heirs; of their eſtabliſh'd Reputation in the World for Piety, Wiſdom and Humanity; and that no ſuch Neceſſity was like to appear in their Days? p. 15.

Countrym. And ſuppoſe, if he had, I had ask'd him again, whether he or his Author thought it was likely to appear ſooner? No, No, Maſter, here it ended; my Antagoniſt either could not or would not reply, but gave me a Doff of his Hat, and march'd off; and the reſt of the Company were either ſullen, or ſatisfy'd, 'tis all one to Roger; for a Nod or a Doff was all that paſſed parting between us: So that 'tis to you, Maſter, that I muſt now appeal for the Succeſs of my Conduct in this Affair.

Obſ. That ſhall be our Entertainment over a Bottle, Roger; you're come in a very good time to make one with a Friend or Two of mine, as hearty and true Britons as your ſelf, that have promis'd this Evening to taſt the October you left me. We'll paſs an Hour or Two together, and take each of us a Glaſs to our Queen, the Protſtant Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, their good Allies; the Heroes of the Confederacy againſt France every where; the Conſtitution of our Country without Reſerve; and the Rights and Liberties of all Europe.

E have receiv'd a Confirmation of the News, That the Czar had caus'd Aſoph to be evacuated, and the Fort of Tangarok to be demoliſh'd; and yet this, 'tis thought, will not be ſufficient to hinder the War from breaking out again. Utrecht, April 29. N. S. The Mareſchal d'Uxelles having receiv'd a Cabinet Courier from Marly, late on Saturday Night laſt, the Biſhop of Briſtol and the Earl of Strafford, Plenipotentiaries of Great-Britain, repair'd, on Monday in the Afternoon, to that Mareſchal's Lodgings, where they had a Conference with the French Miniſters, which laſted 4 Hours. The next Morning, the States Plenipotentiaries went to the Earl of Strafford's, and had a Conference of an Hour and half with the Britiſh Miniſters. The ſame Afternoon, the French Plenipotentiaries came to the Biſhop of Briſtol's, where they diſcours'd with both the Britiſh Miniſters from Four a-Clock to Ten at at Night; about an Hour after which, the Earl of Strafford, having a little before reciev'd an Expreſs from London, ſet out for the Hague, to give the States a verbal Account of what had paſs'd in the Conferences with the French.

Bruſſels, May 2. N. S. They write from France, That in order to remove all Obſtacles to the Peace, the Chevalier de S. George is to go to Swiſſerland or Germany, and the late Queen of England to Avignon. Some Thouſands of Imperialiſts are ſhortly expected here from Germany; but we hear, That upon Advice that Prince Ragotski ſues for Succours from the Ottoman Porte, the Empéror has countermanded the Regiments which were marching from Hungary.

Utrecht, May 3. N. S. On Saturday, the 30th paſt, no General Conference was held here, the Miniſters of France not having notify'd to thoſe of the Allies their being prepar'd to give in their Anſwer. The ſame Day, the Baron de Gerſdorf, Plenipotentiary of King Auguſtus, arriv'd from the Hague, where he had been ſome time. Baron Bothmar is alſo come hither, with the Character of Plenipotentiary from the Elector of Hanover, and having notify'd his Arrival, has been complimented thereupon by the Miniſters at this Place. Monſieur d'Alwich, Miniſter of the Landgrave of Heſſe, and ſeveral others, are return'd hither. His Excellency the Earl of Strafford is expected this Evening. Yeſterday, the Miniſters of the Allies held their uſual Conference. Count Corſana is ſhortly expected here, as ſecond Imperial Plenipotentiary.

Hague, May 3. N. S. On Saturday in the Evening, his Grace the Duke of Ormond ſet out hence for Rotterdam, being attended by the Lord North and Grey, Sir Thomas Hanmer, and Count Naſſau Woudenbourg. The Earl of Strafford likewiſe accompany'd his Grace as far as Rotterdam. By the frequent Conferences which the Lord Strafford has lately had with the Deputies of the States, and by the extraordinary Buſineſs which theſe have had in private, it is generally conjectur'd, That this State is at laſt inclin'd to hearken to the Reaſonable Methods propoſed by others of the Allies. Nay, ſome go ſo far as to ſay, the Barrier for this Republick is as good as ſettled, in which caſe we need not much doubt of a ſpeedy Peace. But of this, we may be able to give you a better Account by the next Poſt.

Plymouth, April 25. On the 23d, Her Majeſty's Ships the Breda and Windſor brought in here the Hope of Morlaix, with Proviſions for Martinico, about 100 Tuns, Briſtol-built. Yeſterday, came in Her Majeſty's Ship the Litchfield from the Eaſtward.

Harwich, April 26. Yeſterday, the Merlin-Sloop retook and brought in a London-Hoy, laden with Chalk for this Place, with 9 French Men put on board to carry her off. The Privateer made her Eſcape among the Sands.

Portſmouth, April 26. Sir Hovendon Walker, in the Monmouth, with 8 Men of War more, and a Fleet of about 250 Sail of outward-bound Merchant Ships, came from the Downs to Spithead and St. Helens.

London, April 29 Mr. Thomas Kerby, late Secretary of the Leeward Iſlands, and ſworn Clerk to the Council of Antegoa, is now committed to Newgate, for High-Treaſon, as being one of the Principals concern'd in the Murder of Col. Parke, and Her Majeſty's Troops, in the late Rebellion of Antegoa. And we have Advice, That Col. Douglas has drawn the Queen's Troops from the other Leeward Iſlands, and taken up ſeveral of the Ring-Leaders in Antegoa.

It having been deny'd that the Seditious Words, mention'd in The Plain-Dealer of Saturday laſt, were ſpoke in a Coffee-houſe near Guild-hall on the 18th inſtant, we have enquir'd into that Relation, and have receiv'd undoubted Information of the Truth of it, which may ſerve as a freſh Specimen of the Modeſty, as well as the Deſigns of a certain Party, eſpecially conſidering how many of them reſort to that Houſe, and the frequent Cabals held there.
